KEYNOTE ADDRESSES

Juan Cartagena is President and General Counsel of LatinoJustice PRLDEF, a national civil rights public interest law organization that represents Latinas/os throughout the United States and works to increase their entry into the legal profession. He is a constitutional and civil rights attorney who has vast experience litigating cases on behalf of Latina/o and African American communities in the areas of voting rights, employment discrimination, language rights, access to public education for poor and language minority children, and housing. A graduate of Dartmouth College and Columbia Law School, Mr. Cartagena previously served as a municipal court judge in Hoboken, New Jersey, and as the General Counsel for the Hispanic Bar Association of New Jersey.

Amelie F. Constant is Visiting Research Scholar at Princeton University and the Office of Population Research. She is the President of the Society of Government Economists, an affiliated scholar at UNU-MERIT, an academic member of ATINER, a member of the European Academy of Sciences, and a member of the Editorial Board of Applied Economics Quarterly. Previously, she was Director of the Migration Area at the Institute for the Study of Labor, the founding editor of the IZA Journal of Migration, and the founding director of DIWDC. Her research lies mainly in the economics of migration. She is the co-editor of the International Handbook of the Economics of Migration, Foundations of Migration Economics, How Labor Migrants Fare?, a volume of the Research in Labor Economics Journal, and special issues of the Journal of International Manpower. Constant received her Ph.D. in Labor Economics and Econometrics from Vanderbilt University.

Douglas S. Massey is the Henry G. Bryant Professor of Sociology and Public Affairs at Princeton University’s Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs. He is co-author of American Apartheid (1993), which won the Distinguished Publication Award of the American Sociological Association, and of Climbing Mount Laurel (2013), which won the Paul Davidoff Award. Massey has also published extensively on immigration, including Miracles on the Border (1995), which won a 1996 Southwest Book Award, and Beyond Smoke and Mirrors (2002), which won the 2004 Otis Dudley Duncan Award for the best book in social demography. Massey has served on the faculty of the University of Chicago. He received his Ph.D. from Princeton University in 1978. Massey is a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the American Philosophical Society. He is Past-President of the Population Association of America, the American Sociological Association, and the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Carmen Teresa Whalen is the Professor of History and Latina/o Studies at Williams College, where she has also served as the Chair of the Latina/o Studies program and as the Associate Dean for Institutional Diversity. Her interests focus on Latina/o migrations in the contexts of local, regional and global economies. Her first book, From Puerto Rico to Philadelphia: Puerto Rican Workers and Postwar Economies (2001), examined the economic displacements and the labor migrations of Puerto Rican women and men in the post-World War II era. Her current research explores Puerto Rican women workers and the globalization of New York City’s garment industry in the post-World War II era. Author of a photographic history, El Viaje: Puerto Ricans of Philadelphia (2006), she is also the co-editor of a textbook, Major Problems in Latina/o History (2015) and co-editor of The Puerto Rican Diaspora: Historical Perspectives (2005).
Rachel F. Moran is the inaugural William H. Neukom Fellows Research Chair in Diversity and Law and the Co-Director of The Future of Latinos in the United States: Law, Opportunity, and Mobility at the American Bar Foundation (ABF) with Robert L. Nelson. Moran is also Dean Emerita and Michael J. Connell Distinguished Professor of Law at UCLA School of Law. Prior to her tenure at UCLA, Professor Moran was the Robert D. and Leslie-Kay Raven Professor of Law at UC Berkeley School of Law. She also served as a founding faculty member of the UC Irvine Law School. Moran received her A.B. in Psychology with Honors and with Distinction from Stanford University in 1978, where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa her junior year, and her J.D. from Yale Law School in 1981, where she was an Editor of the Yale Law Journal. Some of her recent scholarship includes: Educational Policy and the Law (with several collaborators, 2012); Race Law Stories (co-authored, 2008); Interracial Intimacy: The Regulation of Race and Romance (2001); “A New Twist on the One Best System: Structured English Immersion Initiatives, Equal Opportunity, and Freedom To Learn,” in The Miseducation of English Learners: A Tale of Three States and Lessons To Be Learned (Grace P. McField, ed., 2014); “Youth Civic Development and Education: A Consensus Report on a Conference,” (co-authored, 2013); and “What Counts as Knowledge?: A Reflection on Race, Social Science, and the Law,” 44 Law and Society Review 515 (2010).

Robert L. Nelson is the Director Emeritus of the American Bar Foundation, the MacCrate Research Chair in the Legal Profession at the ABF, and professor of sociology and law at Northwestern University. He holds a J.D. and Ph.D. in sociology, both from Northwestern, and has held several positions of academic leadership throughout his career. He is a leading scholar in the fields of the legal profession and discrimination law. He has authored or edited eight books and numerous articles, including Legalizing Gender Inequality, which won the prize for best book in sociology in 2001, and Urban Lawyers: The New Social Structure of the Bar (with John Heinz, Edward Laumann, and Rebecca Sandefur, 2005). His current research includes After the JD, a national study of the careers of lawyers, which is tracking the entering bar class of 2000 for the first 10 years of their careers (with several collaborators); the Changing Dynamics of Employment Discrimination project, which examines a large national sample of federal court filings between 1988 to present and has interviewed parties and their lawyers about their experiences in these cases (with Laura Beth Nielsen and Ellen Berrey); and the Future of Latinos in the United States: Law, Opportunity, and Mobility (with Rachel F. Moran). He is co-director of the ABF’s Research Group on Legal Diversity.

Cristina Rodríguez is the Leighton Homer Surbeck Professor of Law at Yale Law School. Her research interests include constitutional law and theory; immigration law and policy; administrative law and process; language rights and policy; and citizenship theory. In recent years, her work has focused on constitutional structures and institutional design. She has used immigration law and related areas as vehicles through which to explore how the allocation of power (through federalism and the separation of powers) shapes the management and resolution of legal and political conflict. Her work also has involved examination of the effects of immigration on society and culture, as well as the legal and political strategies societies adopt to absorb immigrant populations. Rodríguez joined Yale Law School in 2013 after serving for two years as Deputy Assistant Attorney General in the Office of Legal Counsel at the U.S. Department of Justice. She was on the faculty at the New York University School of Law from 2004-2012 and has been Visiting Professor of Law at Stanford and Harvard Law Schools. She is a non-resident fellow at the Migration Policy Institute in Washington, D.C. and has been a member of the Council on Foreign Relations. She earned her B.A. and J.D. degrees from Yale and attended Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar, where she received a Master of Letters in Modern History. Following law school, Rodríguez clerked for Judge David S. Tatel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and Justice Sandra Day O’Connor of the U.S. Supreme Court.
Nancy Andrade, Lead Counsel, Commission on Hispanic Legal Rights & Responsibilities, American Bar Association

Jennifer Chacón, Professor of Law, University of California Irvine School of Law

Mariano-Florentino Cuéllar, Associate Justice, California Supreme Court; Visiting Professor, Stanford University School of Law

Maria Echaveste, Policy and Program Development Director, Chief Justice Earl Warren Institute on Law and Policy, University of California Berkeley School of Law

Lilia Fernández, Associate Professor, Department of History, Ohio State University

Luis Ricardo Fraga, Arthur Foundation Endowed Professor of Transformative Latino Leadership and Professor of Political Science, University of Notre Dame

Luz Herrera, Assistant Dean for Clinical Education, Experiential Learning, and Public Service, UCLA School of Law

Kevin R. Johnson, Dean and Mabie-Apallas Professor of Public Interest Law and Chicana/o Studies, University of California Davis Law School

Douglas S. Massey, Henry G. Bryant Professor of Sociology and Public Affairs, Princeton University

Ajay Mehrotra (ex officio member), Director, American Bar Foundation; Professor, Northwestern Pritzker School of Law

Alfonso Morales, Associate Professor, Department of Urban and Regional Planning, University of Wisconsin-Madison

Cristina Rodríguez, Leighton Homer Surbeck Professor, Yale Law School

Daniel Rodriguez, Dean and Harold Washington Professor, Northwestern Pritzker School of Law

Leticia Saucedo, Professor of Law, UC Davis School of Law

Gary M. Segura, Professor of Political Science, Stanford University